

East Texas native, Dylan Wheeler dropped his debut EP "Tell Me If I'm Wrong" in November of 2018 and since, his name has continued to be added to lists of emerging singer/songwriters to watch in the Texas/Red dirt music scene. The 24-year-old out of Edgewood Texas didn't begin his musical journey until age 22 after leaving the oilfield to pursue his dream of becoming a touring musician. The dynamic singer/songwriter spent the last two years playing solo acoustic shows in and around college towns, helping him gain popularity amongst college crowds. Wheeler's musical influences range from Rob Thomas and Jared Leto, to Aaron Lewis, which has influenced his own sound. Wheeler's vocals are packed with emotion, season and come out smooth, that, combined with his relatable lyrics and catchy tunes have certainly been the cause of his rapidly growing fan base. His newest tune, "Broke A$$ Kid" now sits at more than 300K streams and has given Wheeler the momentum he needed to take his career to the next level. Wheeler has curated his own sound and style, whether it's full band or solo acoustic, it's certainly a show you won't want to miss. Wheeler is already back in the studio pushing to release new songs before the end of the year.
